What you liked about Hertfordshire Business School?

The dedication off the Business school staff to their student's is unparalleled; lecturers, faculty and support staff wanted you to succeed. This helps students gain the confidence they need to get that illusive graduate role.

What you do in your job?

I initially applied for a Graduate Test analyst role in IBM. However, since I have started, I have moved to a project analyst role. I am currently working with Nationwide Building Society representing within IBM's testing services. My role entails assisting with the supply and demand for the service it's self which covers 700-800 people UK based and abroad. As well as this I work closely with the client to allocate the right person to the correct role, matching skills and experience to the demand coming in from the several projects within Nationwide.
