The course focuses on:

1. vocabulary development including strategies for record keeping and the opportunity to apply in writing and speaking activities
2. strategies for effective and critical reading of texts
3. writing a report or researched essay
4. academic writing and speaking conventions
5. listening comprehension strategies and note taking
6. the development of knowledge and application of referencing conventions as employed in a UK university or academic environment

11b. Further Details: (supporting Learning Outcomes, max 250 words)

The Pre-session English Online (6 weeks) course is learner- and learning - centred with all teaching addressed to the needs of students in order to improve their English for Academic Purposes to the level of the follow-on course. Students will undertake exercises to develop a range of vocabulary common to academic texts. They will be encouraged to understand how grammar and vocabulary contribute to create written and spoken academic discourse, for example, writing a researched essay related to their field of study.

Students will undertake activities to help them to: deal effectively with spoken input in conversations, seminars and lectures; produce spoken English intelligibly; increase reading efficiency; and make useful notes while reading or listening. In addition, they will be exposed to spoken academic discourse in a variety of accents. At specific points during the course they will be required to give a short presentation related to their academic subject. In addition, students will develop the use of library and internet resources which they will use to plan, research and write an academic essay or report.

Classwork and independent study will focus on:

1. academic writing and speaking conventions
2. vocabulary acquisition and storage
3. text-type understanding and discourse-level analysis
4. grammar acquisition
5. strategies for effective reading, note-taking, summarising, and synthesis
6. pronunciation and academic speaking/presentation
